

My Inner Hero

An extension of "Comic war: Marvel vs DC"

There is a little hero in each of us, waiting to emerge. On the outside, you may not look anything like the Avengers or Justice League superheroes (see pages 16 and 17, What's Up June 2018). But, on the inside, you may have some of the same good qualities. These qualities can guide the hero in you to do wonderful acts of kindness and compassion. Isn't that an awesome thought? Explore this idea by doing the following activity.

Instructions

1. Divide your class into eight groups with every group having about the same number of students.
2. Within your group, share all you know about these Marvel and DC superheroes.

3. As a group, help one another to identify what each of you has in common with any of the twelve superheroes. You may be like as many of the superheroes as you wish to be.
4. Next, brainstorm ways in which all of you can make life better for both kids and adults at your school. Let the hero in you grow by being kind and caring to others.
