An activity of "Earth's health depends on more than cute animals"

In "Earth's health depends on more than cute animals" (page 16–17, What's Up March 2020), the author looks at some animals that play a big part in keeping our ecosystems healthy. Read the story, pick an animal and fill in the table below. Then, using the information, make a poster to share the details of your chosen animal with your classmates.

Name of animal
Habitat Where does it live?
Diet What does it eat?
How it helps the environment
What threatens its survival

Here are some tips for your poster:

- Keep it simple, clear, and concise. What is the key information you need?
- The words on your poster should be readable from at least a metre away.
- Use at most two different types of font. Too many different font types can look messy.
- Use three or four colours – too many colours can be distracting.
- Include a picture of the animal. You can either draw it or copy and paste a free online image. If you use a copied image, insert a credit line to say where it is from.
