First Person to Third Person

An activity of "How I define beauty"

In the article "How I define beauty" (page 18, What's Up July 2020), Winnie Harlow relates her experience of being alienated. She uses the first person — using the pronouns I, me, myself. Now, imagine you are describing her experience to a friend. You would have to use the third person in your description. How would you do that?

Rewrite the following sentences in the third person.

No.	First person	Third person
1	When I was young, I was picked on for something that today I feel is amazing.	_____ _____ _____
2	I was singled out because of my skin condition, which is called vitiligo.	_____ _____ _____
3	When I changed school, I found two girls who were willing to play with me.	_____ _____ _____
4	After a few weeks, they started to avoid me at school.	_____ _____ _____
5	I was confused and wondered to myself why I was struggling to make friends.	_____ _____ _____
6	The girls told me they were afraid to catch my skin condition.	_____ _____ _____
7	I felt hurt. I wasn't asked if I wanted this skin condition. Yet, I was alienated for it.	_____ _____ _____
