Well Worth the Wait!

An activity of "My Quest for the Great Hornbill".

In the October issue of What's Up, you will find a delightful comic titled "My quest for the great hornbill" (page 20–23). Read it carefully. To get some background information, browse through "These big birds are back" and "Spotted in the city" (page 19) as well.

1a) Think of something that you would not mind waiting a long time for. For example, it might be an especially delicious meal, a long-awaited movie sequel, or a rare collectors' card. Write it down in the box below.

1b) Explain why you would not mind waiting a long time for it.

1c) What are some feelings you may have during the wait? Describe them below.

e.g. I feel anxious . I worry that they will run out of stock before it is my turn!

2a) Take a look at the sequence of events that cartoonist Rohan Chakravarty used in his hornbill comic: description of bird → the fruitless wait → the final reward. Then, develop your own sequence for your story titled, "The Long Wait". Draft your comic in the template below. Insert little arrows to show the direction of your story from cell to cell.

2b) Transfer your comic onto a fresh sheet of paper and add colour.

3) Share your comic with your classmates. Have fun!
