All Included!

An activity of "Tee and Boba".

Read the comics, "Tee and Boba" (page 28, What's Up September 2023). Can you see how hard Tee tries to be inclusive? We too can make sure we leave no one out. This activity encourages you and your classmates to explore everyday ways of being inclusive.

1. Form groups of four to six members each. Each group then picks one of the following scenarios to work on.

- A group is working on a project. One student is consistently left out of their discussions because she is very quiet and shy.
- A sports team is choosing members for an upcoming competition.
- A group of friends is planning a birthday party and wants to include everyone and everyone's ideas.
- A new student does not understand many of the insider jokes in class because they refer to past events.
- At a family reunion, two of the kids try to bring three generations of relatives together to play a game.
- For the end-of-year party in class, the menu planners realise that there are a couple of vegetarians, two student who can't eat pork, and a vegan.
- A foreign student has just joined the class. She misses her former school very much.
- The whole class has to perform a musical item at the school concert. Three students get stage fright easily. Two others are go off key when singing.

2. In your group, share ideas about how to be inclusive in your selected scenario. Then, develop a skit demonstrating your group's best ideas. Jot down your ideas here ↓.
