

Name: _____

Class: _____ Date: _____

Synthesis & Transformation

An activity of "Once upon a time, a Korean prince invented the modern way to measure rain"

It is important to use different sentence structures in your writing to create a sense of variety. The sentences below are adapted from "Once upon a time, a Korean prince invented the modern way to measure rain" (Page 22, What's Up August 2026). Rewrite them into one sentence each using the helping words.

1. Most early recordings were not always accurate. The instruments and methods for collecting rainfall varied from one place to another.

because _____

2. The network of cheugugis was installed across Korea. It was the world's first standardised rainfall observation system.

_____, which _____

3. Scientists use supercomputers to study historical records on atmospheric conditions. They also use live data on elements such as temperature and rainfall.

Besides _____

scientists also _____

4. The original cheugugi has since been replaced by modern versions.

Modern versions _____

5. When Japan attacked Korea in 1592, the rainfall measurement system was suspended. It was revived in 1770 by King Yeongjo.

Before _____
